RUBIN "Hurricane" CARTER

When Rubin Carter was young, he dazzled the world with his fast and furious boxing style which made him a crowd favourite and earned him the professional name, "Hurricane".

On the eve of triumph, one fight away from becoming the Middle-weight Champion of the world, he lost everything.. He was wrongly convicted of a triple murder in the state of New Jersey even though he had no motive for the murder; didn't match the killers' description; was cleared of being the attacker by two of the victims and, passed a lie detector test.

Narrowly escaping the electric chair, Rubin "Hurricane" Carter was given three life sentences, but he never gave up the fight for his freedom. After 20 long years in prison, Rubin's conviction was finally overturned.

This amazing life has been chronicled in the critically acclaimed Hollywood film, The Hurricane, starring Denzel Washington and directed by Norman Jewison.

He is one of the most powerful inspirational speakers to share his thoughts and his perspective on life. He takes you on a journey of personal satisfaction and enlightens you to your own personal worth, going beyond your fears...

Panel Discussion on Music and the Internet: "Rocking in the Not So Free Virtual World"

The evolution of the Internet has resulted in the proliferation of music downloading and file sharing. The ability to share music files and create compact discs containing copyrighted material has in turn left the music industry searching for answers to this dilemma. One possible alternative involves litigation against those who infringe on copyrighted material. Other possibilities include the creation of new business models for the distribution of music and other content as a response to these technical advancements. This panel discussion will highlight the challenges presented to the music industry and potential solutions from the perspective of the consumer, recording artist, and legal professional. The legal and economic ramifications of music downloading will also be discussed in order to provide the audience with the foundation of the current law and an insight into how the law will change.

Panelists:

- Mario Bouchard - legal counsel for the Copyright Board of Canada
- Alan Cross - host of 102.1 FM's "Ongoing History of New Music"
