SPEAKERS COMMITTEE:

Monday November 8 at 7:00pm in the Moot Court:
Panel Discussion on Music and the Internet: "Rocking in the Not So Free Virtual World"

The evolution of the Internet has resulted in the proliferation of music downloading and file sharing. The ability to share music files and create compact discs containing copyrighted material has in turn left the music industry searching for answers to this dilemma. One possible alternative involves litigation against those who infringe on copyrighted material. Other possibilities include the creation of new business models for the distribution of music and other content as a response to these technical advancements.

This panel discussion will highlight the challenges presented to the music industry and potential solutions from the perspective of the consumer, recording artist, and legal professional. The legal and economic ramifications of music downloading will also be discussed in order to provide the audience with the foundation of the current law and an insight into how the law will change.
